

"I remember the first time I noticed it. My son had arranged a trip to West Palm Beach for my wife and I," the retired commercial banker stated in a recent conversation. "It had been a year since I had ventured outside of our house—I had been too weak from the treatments and surgery to walk for any length of time and thought a trip would be good for us. I was slowly getting back to normal. But then the pain began."

It started in his right foot, but soon spread to his other foot.. Activities he had always enjoyed such as long walks with his wife and weekend outings with his grown children became too painful to endure. "My son and I share a love for college football and always tried to make several games a season. But the walk across the parking lot to the stadium became too much for me, the pain unbearable." Jerry's voice took on a somber tone. "My son had to go on without me."

The next thirteen years were spent chasing treatment after treatment. Jerry made visits to countless podiatrists, sports medicine doctors, endured hours of physical therapy and foot exercises, and collected 'a closet full of orthopedic devices. "When foot surgery failed, his doctors turned to prescription drugs. "A high dose of Neurotin (2400 units) gave me some relief but resulted in major side effects." Thousands of dollars spent and still no relief in sight, Jerry settled into an unending routine of ice foot baths and Ibuprofen. "I hadn't slept through a night in years because of the pain."

In August of 2007, an article in the Grand Rapids Press caught Jerry's attention. "It was like the story was waiting on my doorstep just for me. I know I wanted to try Chemolyte Recovery." His wife wanted him to give the supplement a chance too. "She asked me one day shortly after we read the article who was going to make the call to get some, me or her."

One month into the course of Chemolyte Recovery, Jerry's life has changed profoundly. His usual sleepless nights have been replaced by hours of painless slumber. For the first time in years, he's replaced his foot bath tub with a tool belt, working on an entertainment system his children gave him for a recent birthday. "Yesterday, I was on my feet all afternoon, rummaging through three different stores and today, no long term pain."

"I've been thinking about going to a college football this year now that I'm feeling better," he said, a smile creasing his face. "Chemolyte Recovery is the best treatment I've found for the relief of my foot pain."
